Will Deliver an Address before the Convention.

WAITE SPEAKS.

[illegible]

[illegible] The delegates to the silver convention were in a veritable fog this morning, [illegible] that night having [illegible] an hour that [illegible] this fore[illegible] Labor prevailed [illegible] that the financial [illegible] and harassing the [illegible] world by satisfactory [illegible]

N. P. Hill of Colorado addressed the silver [illegible] on the silver question [illegible] hour. He spoke [illegible] of thought and [illegible] gold standard [illegible] of agri[illegible] the dimmer [illegible] of productive [illegible] of laborers [illegible] who [illegible]

But by [illegible] of the mis[illegible] which per[illegible] debt and [illegible] depriving [illegible] both [illegible] which [illegible] prices and [illegible] standard [illegible] observed [illegible] countries [illegible] Switzerland [illegible] them an [illegible] in the [illegible] whereby [illegible] a leaf be[illegible] advantage in [illegible] the trade [illegible]

[illegible] that the [illegible] countries [illegible] of our own [illegible] stop the [illegible] anything except [illegible] the duty of the [illegible] protecting [illegible] such a large [illegible] money to [illegible] Mr. Cleveland [illegible] and act from [illegible]

inflation and to [illegible] admitted [illegible] will [illegible] further fall of the price of silver [illegible] strengthen the hands of the money [illegible] of Europe and this country [illegible] avowed ground of attack upon [illegible] actual depreciation would [illegible] step.

It has been often said that the [illegible] Europe, and this is the opinion [illegible] Andrews, refs clearly with [illegible] the monetary equation [illegible] classes of people in England [illegible] debtors and producing [illegible] are bimetallists, [illegible] their actual necessities [illegible] mainly bankers, would [illegible] money sustained at [illegible] unlimited coinage of silver [illegible] times, particularly in the United States [illegible] third class, which [illegible] real policy of England for many [illegible] past, and will probably [illegible] to come, has no interest [illegible] into silver coinage by any [illegible] ing, like or respect to this [illegible] honest value of money resulting from [illegible] depending silver is exactly what they [illegible] are.

I agree with President Andrews [illegible] says about the evils resulting from [illegible] ted currency and in this [illegible] which he describes as possible [illegible] of free coinage of silver [illegible] establish the fair [illegible] coinage of silver will at once [illegible] ever put us on a silver basis [illegible] the disastrous consequences [illegible] free from the ruin of [illegible] the gold world, meaning [illegible] by free coinage we should [illegible] sole silver standard.

The United States is the [illegible] only the only gold country which would venture upon the policy of free coinage of silver. It is strong enough to place [illegible] standard independently of [illegible] world.

Professor Francis A. Walker [illegible] ago, when the panics [illegible] tracted currency [illegible] ed, as they are now [illegible] North America [illegible] ment of silver will [illegible] of the burden of all debts and [illegible] acting as a drag upon production [illegible] cation, strangulation, [illegible] strong to express the [illegible] body when engaged in the [illegible] contracting money.

PRICE OF SILVER.

While it is [illegible] primary cause of the [illegible] monetary of money, [illegible] tributing causes of which [illegible] me to refer to one. I refer to [illegible] change in the farm [illegible] conditions affecting the [illegible] times of the [illegible]

the country are [illegible] unprotected in [illegible] caused by the [illegible] the preceding [illegible] recently probably one of the [illegible] ters of New England [illegible] complete solution of [illegible] that the alarm of the people [illegible] caused solely by the purchase of silver [illegible] the Sherman act. [illegible] in which he was [illegible] $1,500,000 of raw stock [illegible] case of manufactured [illegible] goods. The first amount had been [illegible] party to, [illegible] the trade and secure the [illegible] able results in the long run. Since the last Presidential election he [illegible] changed and he was now working with a view to having the smallest [illegible] with which it would be possible [illegible] mills at all, and that the total [illegible] his stocks would now [illegible] years. In other words, the single [illegible] purchased since the last [illegible] national administration $[illegible] than he would have done if he had [illegible] cure in the immediately [illegible] tariff. This is exactly what [illegible] expected. Every individual and corporation whose money was invested in a protected industry, and the same is true to a large extent in industries not directly protected, would promptly act upon the policy of "sailing close to the wind," and [illegible] as little as possible until [illegible] what the new Congress and the new President intended to do.

The total product of our manufactories last year is reported to be [illegible] If only a small proportion of the men whose property and interests are thereby [illegible] take this view of the tariff [illegible] effect upon the value of products must be enormous.

WHAT IS THE REMEDY?

The remedy for existing conditions is what we now seek, which must necessarily involve the causes which have produced them, or, in other words, the diagnosis of the disease.

It does not seem at present practicable with Mr. Cleveland as President, to increase the use of silver in our coin currency to a greater extent than we are now doing, the probability of passing a measure for that purpose with his signature, or of passing it over his veto, both being extremely remote. But we can at least prevent any further restriction of the rate at which it is now employed. An inflexible adherence to the policy of coining silver in this country, whatever Europe may do, is the shortest anchor of our financial safety.

To whatever extent we employ it, we uphold its value in the silver countries by diminishing the amount which can flow thither, and we relieve the strain upon gold in this country.

If it turns out in the end that the old bimetallic condition can not be restored, and if we finally have to choose between silver and gold as the sole metal money in use in this country, beyond all question we should choose silver. Every consideration points to that conclusion.

A metallic standard exclusively of gold for this country, which has to day $1,000,000,000 of metallic money, and which will within twenty-five years require [illegible] that amount, if we preserve in our circulating the present proportion of paper to coin, is something which bristles all over with impossibilities. Such an absorption of gold as that would carry up its ratio to a height never before dreamed of, and would bankrupt every nation on the gold standard. Wheat would fall to 20 cents per bushel, and general prices in Europe would probably return to the level which existed before the discovery of America.

NO SILVER EMPIRE.

But with the different policy of absorbing silver in our circulation, and still more and more as every succeeding year expands our demand for money, and with the certainty of the support of all the world outside of Europe, we shall be assured against the possibility of any depreciation of our standard. The opposite danger of its appreciation may and must remain, but in respect to silver its appreciation is at most only a danger, whereas, in respect to gold it has already manifested itself in ruinous proportions. It is protection against a silver famine that everywhere along the mountain range which is continuous from the Straits of Magellan to Alaska, silver can always be obtained by the application of capital and labor. There is no such protection against a gold famine, which may exist for centuries, before new gold fields can be found, if they can ever be found at all. It is wholly impossible that the appreciation of silver can extend to a degree which will be beyond the reach of a remedy of an increase of paper money, within the limits of keeping it convertible into coin. On the other hand, if the United States, which is expanding by leaps and bounds, should venture upon the experiment of a metallic money to consist exclusively of gold, the value of that metal would inevitably attain a height which would force us to the issue of inconvertible paper money.

We have too long been frightened by the bugaboo of becoming heathen if we do not follow the dictation of the countries of western Europe, and particularly of England. Citizens of the United States who can hold such an opinion must be supremely ignorant of their own country.

Until 1873 we had unlimited coinage of gold and silver, while England adopted in 1816 a strictly gold basis and has adhered to it ever since. [illegible] that we were made poorer by our bimetallic policy.

NO FIAT MONEY.

I am not to be understood as favoring an inconvertible paper money. I am entirely opposed to flat money, but after the experience of those years I am not able to participate in the feeling of danger so prevalent now, of the consequences of the United States if it must adopt the policy of maintaining bimetallism, involving as it should, the unlimited coinage of gold and silver. Neither am I to be understood as favoring a silver standard for this country, but I believe that if we restore silver to its old place as [illegible] members who have elected were pledged in favor of the free coinage of silver, will [illegible] from that mercenary Congress to the people, and such an opposition can only find expression through a political [illegible] party [illegible] reformed. The [illegible] hearted and false friends of silver who make the free coinage of silver subsidiary to their party necessities, deny to our nation its only salvation.

In closing Governor Waite said: Who [illegible] years of Benjamin Harrison and [illegible] their supporters on Wall street and Chicago, that they are [illegible] into poverty and exile, half a million of American [illegible] when there is no place. Most dangerous tyranny is that exerted under the forms of law. Our weapons are arguments and ballots, free speech and fair courts. If the money power shall attempt by its usurpation of our rights by trying to take us in other lands, we will meet that issue if it is forced upon us, for it is better, infinitely better, rather than that our liberties should be destroyed by tyranny that is oppressing humanity all over the world, that we should wade through seas of blood, yea, blood to the horses' bridles." [Prolonged applause.]

Congressman Pierce of Tennessee, the successful Chairman, filled in the [illegible] Congress, was received with great enthusiasm, and proceeded to make a speech which was the response of the [illegible] of the adoptions of Democrat [illegible]

[illegible] Democratic party exists [illegible] which [illegible] the party, the party of the Holy [illegible] When silver was demonetized [illegible] have been [illegible] representatives [illegible] Congress voted [illegible] the people [illegible] The Democratic representatives from the South and West [illegible] majority of the House [illegible] Congress have [illegible] free silver [illegible] free coinage of silver. Applause. [illegible] truth [illegible] Applause.

"Cleveland [illegible] Democrat." [illegible] Congressman [illegible] the convention [illegible] Democrat [illegible] to their [illegible] while a [illegible] Washington.

"Why is he a Democrat?" [illegible] said Pierce, "that Grover Cleveland, the man from the East who claims to day to represent the Democratic party, does not represent it, but misrepresents its position on this question. Great applause. Do you know why Cleveland was nominated?

A voice "Six hundred thousand dollars." [laughter.] Our people throughout the South thought Grover Cleveland was the man to put to vote them against the force bill. We also believed that he was an honest man and would not attempt to go against the protest of the will of his party upon any question. The leaders were mistaken as Grover Cleveland's actions to day shows." [Applause and hisses.]

After Mr. Pierce had resumed his seat President Thurman, who had yesterday in his opening address expressed the greatest personal regard for Mr. Cleveland, criticized Mr. Pierce for drifting into partisan discussion.

"We are not here as partisans in any way," said he. "We are not here for the purpose of attacking any party. No party needs any defense here." [Applause.]

Judge C. C. Goodwin of Salt Lake City followed in a half hour speech which was loudly applauded.

The report of the Committee on Resolutions was now read to the convention by Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, interrupted by frequent applause. The report consists of a lengthy preamble, and resolutions as follows:

1. That there must be no compromise of this question; all legislation demonetizing silver and restricting the coinage thereof, must be immediately and completely repealed by an act restoring the coinage of the country to the conditions established by the founders of the nation; and which continued for over eighty years without complaint from any part of our people. Every hour's delay in undoing the corrupt work of Ernest Seyd, and our foreign enemies is an insult to the dignity of the American people, a crushing burden on their property, and an attempt to place us again under the yoke from which George Washington and his compatriots rescued us. We protest against the financial policy of the United States being made dependent upon the opinions or policies of any foreign government, and assert the power of this nation to stand on its own feet and legislate for itself upon all subjects.

2. We assert that the only remedy for our metallic financial troubles is to open the mints of the nation to gold and silver on equal terms, at the old ratio of sixteen ounces of silver to one of gold. Whenever silver bullion can be exchanged at the mints of the United States for legal tender silver dollars worth 100 cents each, that moment 412½ grains of standard silver will be worth 100 cents, and as commerce equalizes the prices of all commodities throughout the world, whenever 412½ grains of standard silver are worth 100 cents in the United States they will be worth that sum everywhere else and cannot be bought for less. While it will be urged that such a result would enhance the price of silver bullion, it is sufficient for us to know that a similar increase would be immediately made in the price of every form of property except gold and credits in the civilized world. It would be a shallow selfishness that would deny, reflect to, the mining industries at the cost of bankruptcy to the whole people. The legislation to demonetize silver has given an unjust increase to the value of gold to the cost of the prosperity of mankind. Wheat and all other agricultural products have fallen side by side with silver.

3. That while the "Sherman act" of July 14, 1890, was a device of the enemy to prevent the restoration of free coinage, and is greatly objectionable because it continues the practical exclusion of silver from the mints and reduces it from a money metal to a commercial commodity, nevertheless as its repeal, without the restoration of free coinage would stop the expansion of our currency required by our growth in population and business and widen farther the difference between the two precious metals, thus making the return to bimetallism more difficult, greatly increase the purchasing power of gold, still further break down the price of the products of the farmer and laborer, the mechanic and the tradesman, and plunge still further all commerce, business and industry into such depths of wretchedness as to endanger peace, order, the preservation of free institutions, and the very maintenance of civilization, we, therefore, in the name of the republic and of humanity, protest against the repeal of the said act of July 14, 1890, except by an act restoring free bimetallic coinage as it existed prior to 1873. We suggest that the maintenance of bimetallism by the United States at the ratio of 16 to 1 will increase our commerce with all the silver countries of the world, and enable two-thirds of the world, without decreasing our commerce with those nations which buy our raw material, and will do more to compel the adoption of bimetallism by the nations of Europe than any other means.

We insist that the unparalleled calamities which now afflict the American people are not due to the so-called [illegible] laws of trade, but are proof that we call attention to the fact that the [illegible] the gold standard world. We are convinced that bad as is the state of affairs in this country it would have been still worse but for the Sherman act, by which the nation has obtained to some extent an expanding circulation to meet the demands of a continent in process of occupation, and the business enterprises of the most energetic and industrious race that has ever dwelt on the earth, and we insist upon the execution of the law without [illegible] it is upon the statute books, and upon the purchase of the full amount of silver each month that it provides for, by the end of the monthly addition to the circulating medium the law assigns shall be maintained.

That we would call the attention of the people to the fact that as the burden of the troubles of the time the union of the national bonds and national legal tenders, whether made of gold, silver or paper, [illegible] fallen in price. The [illegible] of the government of [illegible] the banks, which while [illegible] the present panic on the country, in an ill advised effort to [illegible] the action of Congress on the silver question and to issue bonds.

We invite the bankers to attend to their legitimate business and permit the people to have their full share of the money of the government. In this way they will much sooner restore that confidence which is so necessary to the prosperity of the people. It must not be forgotten that while banks of trade, chambers of commerce, bankers and money dealers are worthy and valuable men in their places, the republic can safely repose upon the great mass of industrious toilers and producers, and that the "business man's age" is rapidly exterminating the business men of this country. The time has come when the people of the nation should revert as far as possible to the simple and primitive ways out of which the republic grew. We suggest for the consideration of our fellow citizens that the refusal of the opponents of bimetallism to propose any substitute for the present law or to change any plan for the future indicates either an ignorance of our financial needs or an unwillingness to take the public into their confidence, and we denounce the attempt to unconditionally repeal the Sherman law as an attempt to secure gold monometallism in flagrant violation of the last national platform of all the political parties.

On motion of Mr. Reagan the resolutions with a slight amendment, were adopted.

On motion of Congressman Bryan of Nebraska the address of Chairman Warner of the Bimetallic league yesterday delivered, was adopted as the address of the convention to the American people.

At the instance of Mr. C. S. Thomas of Colorado the convention extended an unanimous vote of thanks to President Thurman and other officers of the assembly.

Cyclone Davis of Texas got the floor long enough to read a dispatch an an evening paper stating that Secretary Carlisle had been to day in consultation with New York bankers on Wall street to see what they desired done to meet the present crisis. Mr. Davis offered a resolution asking the Secretary of the Treasury to also receive a delegation from the "people" to hear what they thought should be done in the present crisis. The resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote intermingled with execrations of Secretary Carlisle for his "betrayal of silver."

On motion of General Warner of Ohio the convention then adjourned sine die.

The Mining Stocks.

There was an unusual activity in the mining stocks yesterday, especially the cheaper Cripple Creeks. Calumet has dropped to 1¾, and large blocks are being transferred at these figures. A gentleman who is connected with this company and whose word is good said yesterday that the reason for the decline is that two of the largest holders have been pressed for money and had to let go, thus throwing large blocks on the market. The fact that the company's cash is locked up in the Wheeler bank at Manitou, and that work on the property has ceased perhaps accounts for the slump in price. The company however owns its property clear, has no indebtedness, and has a claim equally as good as the Pharmacist. He thought the stock would soon be in stronger hands. Work stock was quite active at 2½ so John A. Sprague reported a sale of 10,000 shares to Denver parties at that price. Anaconda is strong at 16c. Mollie Gibson is held at $1.30 with $1.75 bid.

An Old Story in a New Form.

The platform of the electric car was pretty well taken up by the driver, a man of the "slugger" variety, and a big bag, over which the man of the "slugger" variety appeared to be standing guard. When the conductor came to collect the fares, he looked sharply at the bag and then said to the tough:

"I'll have ter charge yer for that bag."

"I'll bet yer won't," answered the man, looking angrily at him, as if any attempt at collection would induce a prize fight.

"Yes, I will, an if yer don't pay, I'll put dher bag off. See?" said the conductor shortly. He gave the man five minutes more, asked him a second and a third time, then stopped the car and put the bag off on the sidewalk. The "slugger" didn't even move, and when the car had gone about a mile further the conductor said to him:

"Yer don't care much for that bag if you wouldn't pay 5 cents for it."

"Ah, come off!" was the reply. "What's der bag got ter do wid me? Tain't mine. I'd a' told yer so if yer d'asked me."—Boston Budget.

Delicate Sandwiches.

Sandwiches for ball suppers can be made of thin scallops of roast fowl, game or any kind of cooked fish, or of tunny, lobster or the tails of pickled prawns or crayfish, masked by white mayonnaise sauce and aspic jelly, while ordinary sandwiches, according to Francatelli, should be cut from half-quartern loaves and made from thin slices of beef, veal, ham or bacon, seasoned with pepper and salt and French or English mustard, sliced pickles being sometimes added.—Exchange.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Aldermen Vote on Question of Relief Measures.

PENSION PAYMENTS DELAYED.

Western Banks Will Refuse to Cash Government Drafts—A Receiver Appointed for the Rio Grande Southern Road—Other News.

DENVER, Aug. 2.—At a joint convention of the city council to day with the mayor present, a plan for relief for the newly was finally arranged. The plan is for the aldermen to convene in the supervisors' chamber tomorrow and pass a resolution appropriating money for a relief fund to be expended in work. The aldermen will also push through their resolution appropriating money for the same object. The expenditures will be in charge of a committee consisting of the mayor, the supervisors and three aldermen.

Arrangements will probably be made to keep Camp Relief open until Monday, when it is expected the men will either be set to work or have left the city. The number of the men has materially decreased.

Pension Payments Delayed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. Owing to the delay of the National banks of the country to part with their currency at this time, it is probable that the pensioners who are to be paid this month will experience delay in receiving their money. The banks have heretofore cashed nearly all pension checks presented but now they claim that the west have notified the Treasury department that in view of the financial emergency they do not feel [illegible] in doing so at present.

RIO GRANDE SOUTHERN.

A Receiver Appointed on Application of President Mears.

DENVER, Aug. 2. E. T. Jeffery, president of the Rio Grande road, was to day appointed receiver of the Rio Grande Southern upon application of Otto Mears, president of the latter.

Statements are made that the bonded indebtedness of the company amounts to $[illegible] and the first mortgage bonds, floating indebtedness and amount due employes amounts to $1,[illegible]. In the treasury not any $[illegible] in bonds [illegible] which will be applied to the floating indebtedness and to the pay of employes.

IS HE CRAZY?

Ex-Senator Ingalls Breaks the Record as a Calamity Howler.

ATCHISON, Kan., Aug. 2. Ex Senator John Ingalls this afternoon in an interview with an United Press correspondent said:

"This day is fatal and auspicious in equal measure with the goods and storms just ahead of us. The ultimate result will be a redistribution of the assets of the country. The millionaire of to day will occupy the pauper's hut and the pauper in the near future will ride in the chariot of the millionaire. Colorado and the other mineral States should be blotted out as States and added to the great American desert from which they were taken. The devastation of the yellow fever in the South was not half so disastrous as the situation in Colorado produced by the closing of the mines. Thousands of people are walking the streets of Denver; like the leaky Noatchee foxes, have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Colorado tramp hath not where to lay his head. On every street corner in Denver goes up the piteous cry goes up for bread. In Wall street the piteous cry goes up for gold. When these two panicky conditions come together in the great Mississippi valley chaos and anarchy will follow."

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Money on call has been easy, ranging from 3 to 6 per cent. last loan at 6 and closing offered at 3.

The improvement which set in at the Stock Exchange yesterday made further progress to-day. The heavy importations of gold and the movement on the part of the national banks of this city to take out new circulation by depositing government bonds with the Treasury department at Washington have relieved the strain in financial circles and are mainly responsible for the sharp recovery in both the stock and bond market. The rise in the former to-day was assisted by purchases for the account of leading operators who saw the opportunity of making a profitable turn at the expense of the shorts. The fact that the bears experienced difficulties in making prompt deliveries and that when the demand to cover became urgent the supply of stocks was found to be scarce also had a marked influence. The rise suffered no particular interruption until after midday when some of the smaller bulls realized profits. The bears then started to put out a fresh line of short contracts but after a brief spell of weakness the market again met with effective support and as a rule the best figures of the day were attained after delivery hour. Speculation left off strong in tone. The sales were 333,315 shares.

ENDOWMENT POLICIES

Are issued by the PROVIDENT LIFE & TRUST CO., of Philadelphia, which are made payable at a certain specified age of the insured, or at death if occurring before that age is reached.

These policies, if discontinued after two years, are entitled to paid-up policies for a proportional amount, which paid-up policies will also participate in the dividends.

This is obviously the most desirable form of insurance. Ordinarily the head of a family is confronted with two contingencies: First, his death may be untimely, and he may leave his family with an inadequate provision. Secondly, if he should escape this calamity and should live to the commencement of old age, he might find himself with failing powers without a competence for himself and wife. An endowment policy provides against both contingencies. If death should occur the amount of the policy is paid to the family; or, if the insured should live to the maturity of the policy, the amount is paid to himself as a support for his and his wife's old age. SENATOR HILL'S SPEECH.

At last an advocate of silver has spoken of whom the people of Colorado have reason to be proud. The speech of ex-Senator Hill, printed in our news columns to-day, is one of the ablest, most conservative pleas for bimetallism that has ever been delivered. It is a speech that must command respect and attention wherever it is read, and which will not fail to have great influence upon the action of Congress. It will have particular weight because it is the opinion of a man who is reasonable and conservative, and whose views are the result of well digested information, rather than of personal interests and prejudices. We doubt if any man in America has had better opportunities for information on this subject and few have by original research added so much to the current stock of facts.

Mr. Hill takes a strong position in favor of free coinage, with the concurrence of other nations if possible, but if that is not possible, by the United States alone. His central idea seems to be that whatever evils and dangers may arise from this course, they will be less than would come from a policy involving a dependence upon an insufficient single gold standard.

To honest men who are acquainted Senator Hill's record this speech was not necessary to prove him the friend of silver, but it is to be hoped that it will cause the cessation, at least for a time, of the malicious and unwarranted attacks made upon him by less deserving individuals who are jealous of any services besides their own.

CONGRATULATIONS.

That Colorado Springs is very much more prosperous than any other city in the west just at the present time is a matter which does not admit of a doubt. Hotel keepers, real estate agents, and others who are in a position to know agree that so far as the volume of tourist travel is concerned, this is a fair average season, and while the average visitor does not perhaps spend quite as much money as usual, there is on the whole very little reasonable ground for complaint so far as concerns the main industry of this city. Something very similar might be added as to the outlook for the coming winter. A remark was recently made by Secretary Buckman of the Chamber of Commerce to the effect that the invalid travel, which forms the principal part of the winter accretions to our population, is a matter of necessity and not of luxury or pleasure seeking. This is undeniably true. Medicine and medical attendance are the last grounds for economy, and the invalid tourist is the most persistent of all. In this connection it should be remembered that the condition of affairs for which we have good reason for felicitation, is due, more than to anything else, to the wisdom and industry of the executive officers of the Chamber of Commerce. It is a high triumph for them that in the midst of the hard times they have secured to the city a season of average prosperity, and there is abundant room for bewildering speculation in the thought of what might have happened if the same amount of well-applied energy had been expended under more favorable circumstances.

The session laws of the Ninth General Assembly have been printed and published. The volume is one of the most remarkable ever issued from the press. As a sample of Populist spelling, grammar, punctuation and proof-reading it is unique. It would take somebody sharper than the proverbial "Philadelphia lawyer" to tell what a good many of the laws were intended to mean. In fact, the volume would be supremely ridiculous if it were not so disgraceful, and so likely to lead to confusion in the interpretation and application of the laws.

The chances are that President Carnot and his ministers are not familiar with a little ballad which begins

"It was August the third
And quite soft was the breeze,
Which it might be inferred,
Then, a spy was the wise—
But the Heathen Chinee is peculiar."

This being August the third, it would be a good day for the Ministry to try their hands at a translation of the simple lyric of the California poet. They might find therein some instruction in the "small game" upon which they have entered, and beware of blotting over a pack.

With the importation of a large amount of gold, and an increase in national bank circulation, the money market shows a marked relief. Bonds and stocks rose decidedly yesterday, and there is a renewed feeling of confidence.

A solid year of Congress is what Mr. Cleveland—and, incidentally, the rest of us—have got to look forward to. The Congressmen who stay in Washington will earn their salaries this time.

The real address to the country of the Chicago Convention is Senator Hill's speech.

Governor Waite did get loose yesterday, but he didn't scare anybody to death.

TORTURED BY A BUTTON.

Agony Endured by a Drummer in the Displacement of a Suspender.

The drummer for a wholesale candy house in the city of Chicago was in his room the other morning. He was hot and irritable. Great beads of perspiration stood upon his forehead, and he swore strongly and long.

He was sewing buttons on a pair of trousers.

"I have got out this infernal job from day to day for two weeks," he explained. "The last button came off down in Louisville, and I doubled it on suspender straps on one button. A week later the other side was served in the same way, and again I doubled up.

"I didn't wear the darned thing again until in Cincinnati a week ago, when I took a girl to the theater. I was fixed up to kill that night and thought I was going to have a huge time. We arrived late, and the house was filled with fashionably dressed people. I had just handed our seventeen-pounds to an usher and started loftily down the aisle, knowing several score of eyes were sizing up my shape, when with a rip and a snap one of those doubled up buttons tore from its fastening and fell on the brain pan in chair in which sat a young lady of my acquaintance. I blushed a deep maroon, interrupted an apology and kept on my way. I tried my best to keep cool and look unconcerned, but when the devilish behavior of things began to longer kept in suspense, so to speak, began to slide downward and to drag upon the floor I particularly broke down and nearly fell over myself in my effort to get into the seat.

"Did I enjoy the play? Does a Hindoo enjoy himself when he commits hara-kiri? Does a baby enjoy itself cutting teeth? Does a man enjoy a wrestle with a buzz saw? I did the Desdemona act in my waistband half a dozen times, but it seemed only to aggravate the trouble. I was hot, hilarious and ugly, and several questions put by my sole partner were I fear, treated with uncommon incivility. I know this, that she relapsed into complete silence and hasn't relapsed out of it since.

"No, I can't say that I enjoyed that play. It was two hours and a half of torture, and when it was over I said a little prayer of thanksgiving all to myself."

He crouched down, his back in a half circle, on the chair, and in the uncertain light he fingered the end of the thread and attempted to string it through the eye of the needle. Several attempts were made, but unsuccessfully.

"Here," he outreated of his visitor, "see what you can do with this."

So saying, he threw himself upon the bed, and flat on his back, with arms stretched, he made havoc of the English language for several minutes.

"What it is to have a friend," he ruminated. "You have come here in the nick of time. You are going to sew on that button and save an hour of hard work and worry. You are one of the best fellows I——"

But his friend, a man who could see the humor of the situation without the aid of a microscope, had slipped from the room without even threading the needle and had gone below to invite up a few brave companions to view through the crack of the door the comical scene within.

They came—five of 'em—and crouching low saw their unfortunate friend spend 15 solid minutes in the effort to equip the needle, then rip it up half an inch into his thumb, then throw trousers, button, thread and needle out of the window and search for a new pair.

"Ha, ha! Tally one on Sam!"

And Sam, who heard a scurrying of feet down the hall, slammed the door and locked it.—Detroit Free Press.

What May Be Done With Hairpins.

"Give her a few hairpins, and she will make home happy," was said of a young woman who possesses infinite resources. It was a figure of speech which will doubtless appeal more to the feminine understanding than to the mind masculine, for the latter will never be able to understand the immense number of uses and possibilities of this ever handy, always accessible female appendage, or convenience, or whatever may be its proper designation. As an all round, desirable traveling companion it has no equal—no Yankee notion can hold a candle to it.

If your Tinchnitz is uncut, out comes the hairpin, and a better paper cutter can not be invented. And—tell it not in Gath—but rather than trouble herself to take off her gloves the society girl will promptly extract a pin from her perfumed tresses, will rub it daintily with her cobweb of a handkerchief and use it in lieu of a fork to eat berries in the train.

As a shoe buttoner in case of necessity all the world knows its merits. Used as a geometrical instrument, it will draw a circle as well as the best of compasses. It can bear bolkin if need be. It can be wire file even. It can pick locks, mend straps, fasten refractory hooks, it can be used as a clothes pin, a book marker—in fact, it is a veritable multum in parvo, and the name of its capabilities is legion in the hands of an American girl of fair abilities.—New York Tribune.

The Fan Game.

A new Japanese game is played with fans, and the pretty paper balls of different colors, which are inflated through a tiny hole which closes with a valve from the inside, and so prevents the slightest escape of air. The balls are tossed as high as possible, and the game consists in preventing their falling by fanning them. It is quite as active as tennis, and the effect is exceedingly picturesque to those looking on. The one who succeeds in keeping her ball the longest from touching the ground wins the game, and in this case won a prize—a dainty fan of white belting cloth with pink sticks. The mother of the young hostess, who was much skilled in the use of water colors, had painted on the white background in letters formed of a succession of tiny roses the word "Darira," the name of the place. It is an Arabic word signifying "our happy home." A long, pink satin ribbon was tied at the end, to recall the table effect, and the whole was a charming souvenir of a delightful occasion.—Mrs. Kingsland in Ladies' Home Journal.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

POI EATING IN HAWAII.

ACQUIRING A TASTE FOR THE POPULAR NATIONAL DAINTY.

A Food Repulsive at First Becomes In Time a Master of Every Desire—How the Natives of the Sandwich Islands Make and Eat Their One Great Food.

At your first meal you inquire hungrily for poi and there is brought you a little wooden bowl or calabash containing a queer looking grayish, sticky compound, resembling paper hanger's paste. You regard it askance and ask for a spoon, but are told it is to be eaten with the fingers.

"Why, no one could take that stuff up in their fingers," you gasp.

"Oh, yes, just see" and into a companion calabash your instructor slips two fingers, and with a twirl, only acquired by long practice, withdraws them loaded with the compound, which is at once transferred to his mouth and swallowed, his countenance assuming meantime an expression of lofty epicurean calm. You do not know what expression may have taken its abode upon your visage, but you know your principal sensation is one of sinon pure horror.

"Now you try it," says Epicurean. Tentatively you thrust one finger into the mess and gather up a minute dose of the delectable food. As you raise it toward your mouth your nose takes cognizance of a sour smell that harmonizes perfectly with the appearance of the poi. You close your eyes and mentally breathing forth a devout ejaculation, you open your mouth and suck the poi from your fingers. By a sublime effort of will you keep your lips closed over the mouthful, while your companion looks on interestedly, evidently expecting to hear your palate scream with delight.

Meantime your imagination is working with lightning speed. The poi is cold and clammy. The poi tastes like stale yeast—it stings your tongue, and an unutterable disgust possesses your soul. You are sure you are going to vomit, though you know you dare not, and you figuratively take yourself by the throat and force yourself to swallow the compound. You can trace its progress through the oesophagus by the horrified shudder that organ gives as the mouthful passes along it, you can hear the villi in your stomach shriek as the doughlike lump makes its appearance among them, and you think you are going to the dogs then and there. "Don't you like it?" you hear some one say. You struggle back to consciousness and murmur your fear that you are not educated to such a high point of taste.

"Oh, never mind," is the consoling reply. "You'll be so fond of it in a day or two you can't keep house without it."

You know better than that, but you offer no contradiction to the assertion. But if you would have the islands with a conscience untainted by poi you must hold to your resolution to abstain from tasting the stuff again. This will be difficult today. You will see all your acquaintances dipping into their calabashes and hear them exclaiming on the delights of poi, and you begin to aspire to taste again. You think about it by day and by night, and at last you venture. You take one step along the downward pathway. As the poet has so touchingly described, "Yo first endure, then pity, then embrace" the calabash.

The closing steps in your career are easy to picture. You will be poi at every meal. You take poi for an appetizer, you use it as top dressing after dessert, you ballast with it before eating, you use it for broken stomach to make the other viands fide easy. If your foot doesn't quite reach, you eat it for the poi to tone up your palate. If you are feeling out of sorts or under the weather, you take a little poi for your stomach's sake. It is useful as an eye opener in the morning, it serves admirably as a nightcap on retiring, it takes the place of afternoon tea, and tiffin is incomplete without poi. In a word, you have contracted the poi habit.

You grow critical in your judgment, and fancy you can discriminate between poi and poi. You become particular as to the shape and appearance of your calabash, and finally go down to town and purchase one after your own taste. You regard with cold disfavor the blunders of inexpert poi eaters. It is not considered elegant to use more than two fingers in eating it or to put the stuff on the edge of the calabash or drop any of it in transit. You acquire a scientific twirl of the fingers in gathering up your mouthful and an airy grace in conveying to your mouth.

Poi is a dish that must long remain peculiar to the Hawaiian islands—always, in fact, unless some means are contrived for preserving taro so that it will stand export. Poi is made from taro, a root resembling the turnip. It grows in the water, with a large, handsome green leaf, and it is almost tasteless. There is also an upland taro cultivated in the mountains by the natives, which has a more decided taste, and which, as I learned to my cost on tasting it, raw bites the throat like horseradish. The low taro is the chief vegetable in the island and in early days constituted the native's principal crop. When cooked, it assumes a mottled gray and white appearance, very like the lava rock that abounds everywhere in the islands.

The process of manufacturing the poi is quite a lengthy one. A great hole is dug in the ground, and into this the taro roots are placed around piles of hot stones. The earth is then heaped over the place and the taro left to steam. When the taro is thoroughly cooked, which is often several hours, the roots are dug out again, peeled and put into a huge stone receptacle, in which they are pounded to a pulp. This work is performed by the men. It is an arduous task, and on a hot day (and nearly all days are hot on the islands) the pounding of poi is a scene over which it is desirable to draw a veil.

The "pot of commerce" is now made by machinery. The natives, however, still make their own. When the mass is thoroughly beaten and smooth, it is mixed with water to the proper consistency—about like thick paste—strained through a coarse cloth and set away for two or three days until it begins to ferment, when it is ready to be eaten. It then tastes a little like buttermilk and is very nutritious and wholesome. The natives eat it by the gallon. Give the average native a big pot of poi, half a dozen raw fish and a bottle of gin, and you may have the kingdom and the rest of the earth as well.

Singularly enough, revolting as this sounds, the actual scene is far from being disgusting. I have watched a dozen natives feasting thus, all dipping poi from the same calabash, and seen less dainty and cleanly table manners in many a backwoods hotel in the States. Why we should swallow a raw oyster without winking and shiver at the thought of raw fish is one of the mysteries of aesthetics few can solve.—San Francisco Call.

The Love of a Daughter.

History abounds with examples of the love that has existed between father and daughter, which proved superior to the changes of time and fortune, defying even death itself, and entering into the records of humanity, imperishable and immortal.

One of the most beautiful instances was the love of Cicero for Tullia. She was a woman of high attainments and exalted character, with qualities of heart and mind that peculiarly fitted her to be her father's intimate companion.

After her death he could find neither consolation for her loss nor distraction for his grief. Affairs of state, weighty matters of political and personal interest, even the sympathy of Brutus and Cæsar, could not dispel the melancholy that settled down upon his soul and forced him for a time into retirement. He wrote of her in these touching words: "A daughter I had, in whose sweet conversation I could drop all my cares and troubles. But now everything is changed." "It is all over with me, Atticus. I feel it more than ever, now that I have lost the only living who still bound me to life."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Impondorable.

The lecturer with the stereopticon had a couple of heavy metal retorts for holding the gas for the machine, and in one of the country towns he hired a man to take them to the railroad station.

"They're right heavy," remarked the man as he got them into his wagon.

"Yes," coincided the lecturer.

"Anything in them?"

"They're full of gas."

The man didn't say anything, but took them along, and after the lecture he was on hand to take them away. He caught hold of one, as if he were going to pick it up like a jug. But somehow it wasn't that light, and after a tug or two he let go in surprise.

"What's the matter?" inquired the lecturer.

"Why, dad bob it," replied the astonished teamster, "you've been using gas out of them things for two hours and they're just as heavy as they was when I carried 'em in here. That's what's the matter."—and the lecturer had to explain the imponderability of gas before the man would take hold again.—Detroit Free Press.

ODD STORIES.

TOLD BY FALTS OF ADVENTURE ON SEA AND LAND.

southern states, possessing a passionate devotion to your section of the Union, such a devotion as led thousands of your fellow countrymen to bear arms and lay down their lives for what they conceived to be a just cause. Am I not right?"

"I am sorry to disappoint you," I replied, "but you are slightly mistaken this time. I was born and reared in the state of Maine, and I do not believe, all told, I have ever spent two years at a stretch out of Massachusetts."

He looked astonished and almost indignant. In fact, he gave me a reproachful glance, as if I were somehow to blame for his error.

"It is most unaccountable," he muttered. "I never made such a mistake before."

Then he relapsed into silence and for a time studying the man in the wide arm chair opposite—a slightly built person in black, who sat in a decidedly respectable and solemn appearance. After a time the physiognomist leaned toward me and cautiously observed:

"See this fellow across here? He looks like a parson, but I know he's going to take him for anything of the kind. He's a card sharp, a gambler, I'm prepared to bet, at those long, white fingers. The easy motion proclaims the man accustomed to one he's got a pair of guns where he can draw and shoot in a minute."

Just then, seeing us regarding him, the man in black fumbled in a large satchel by his side and leaned across the aisle long enough to hand out a paper pamphlet as he said:

"I am a humble servant of the Lord seeking the salvation of lost souls. If you can spare a little time to read over 'The Needs of Perishing Gospel Among the Heathen' I will sell them for 40 cents a copy. How many copies will you take?"

My companion didn't take any, but he looked disgusted with himself and all the world for nearly 30 minutes.

Just ahead of us sat two men who were discussing politics. One was a rough, stoop shouldered fellow with a gruff voice and savage manner, while the other was a little individual whose speech and manner proclaimed decidedly effeminate.

When he could restrain himself no longer the man at my elbow leaned toward me again, speaking guardedly.

"See this little chap ahead? He gives me weariness. Why, he doesn't know more about politics as a male than a female does. His tally is all a bluff. I'll bet a fiver he's no he at all, but is a woman in disguise. I'll prove it to you. Just see him jump up in the air!"

Then he leaned forward and shouted "Hats!" almost in the ear of the little chap. He was not disappointed about seeing the small man go up in the air for that individual leaped and turned upon us, thrusting the muzzle of a heavy revolver under the physiognomist's nose.

"Were you referring to my hat, sir, when you the tariff on wool?" blazed, in quired the effeminate little fellow. "If so, I demand an apology. I am Judge Burgess of Tombstone, Arizona."

"I never saw a man who was better in character reader." He replied, his utter ignorance of the political discussion. We asked a thousand pardons. The man reluctantly put up his revolver and we had to resume the argument concerning the tariff.

After this I tried to catch the eye of the physiognomist, but he was naturally interested in gazing at the car windows. In about 30 minutes he managed:

"I trust you will excuse me. I saw a friend on the platform, who I took good care of room to back away off. My eyes are so that I do not pass, so nearly fritted as a tipsel, so I must hold a satisfactory job."

Then he rose and tumbled sadly away.

Be Looked by a Pirate.

That face of Lewis' called "The Pirate's Own," of which but two or three coarse and tattered copies remain in existence, legend then being prohibited on account of the bloody and questionable nature of its text, gives an interesting sketch of Captain Lewis, the desperate freebooter who was murdered in his cabin by his own men.

Once during his wild career Lewis captured a vessel that made but a feeble attempt to escape, laying to as soon as the pirate fired a gun. Having secured the prize thus easily, Lewis was angered rather than appeased, and when he faced the trembling captain of the captured craft the pirate chief cried:

"Ho, you knave! You miserable coward! You are a dog, for you have betrayed the trust reposed in you by the owners of that vessel. You shall be punished!"

And when the frightened man cringed and begged Lewis added:

"You deserve punishment, for you commanded the faster craft and you might have escaped had you tried."

Then he fell upon the terrified captain, beating him with a rope end and chasing him about the deck.

Hoping to pacify the enraged buccaneer, the master of the captured vessel told him he had been out trading several months and had on board a large sum of money which was hidden, but which he would bring out and deliver at once.

Instead of having the expected effect, this increased Lewis' anger and disgust for the man.

"By my soul, you are a pettifogger!" roared the pirate. "Your punishment shall be doubled!"

Then he had the craven captain tied up and lashed until he fainted with pain. Having secured the money, Lewis allowed the vessel to depart, advising the captain when he reached port to forever remain on shore, where he could conceal himself from danger beneath the petticoats of his wife.

WILLIAM G. PATTIN.

Food For Powder.

What is certain is that Napoleon gained 60 battles, 10 more than Cæsar, and, to quote the figures preserved at the war office, he expended during the wars of the consulate and the empire 1,700,000 men.

This man was visiting the battlefield of Magdeburg, and struck by the number of dead which lay around, some of his soldiers said to Count Rapp, "What is the regiment that has fought so well?" and in the reply, "The Thirty-second," stopped and said meditatively: "How does it still survive? I have killed so much of that regiment, in Italy, in Egypt and everywhere, that there ought to be no more of it left."—London Athenæum.

One Sure Refuge.

Deacon Ironside had been attracted by an interesting story in his favorite paper, The Weekly Commentator, and had found that it led gently to an eloquent and moving dissertation on the merits of Dr. Rybolt's concentrated extract of wild cherry, price 25 cents a bottle, for sale by all druggists.

"It's got so nowadays," he ejaculated, throwing the paper down in disgust, "that there's only about one publication that doesn't trick you into readin' patent medicine puffs."

And he picked up the family Bible and opened it at the book of Jonah.—Chicago Tribune.

Where Dog Catchers Use Lariats.

Poundmaster Creech and his deputies were astir early this morning. The deputies were two colored men who evidently were adepts in the business of dog catching. The way they lassoed the curs was a sight worth witnessing. In most cities scoop nets are employed for this purpose, but the dog catchers of Butte are graduates of the plains, and instead of the net a piece of rope is employed. Standing several yards away, they deftly throw the coiled rope at a cur, and before the latter realizes his danger he is entangled in the lariat.—Butte (Mont.) Mountain.

Treatment of Bunions.

Bunions are serious ailments. About the only thing to do is to wear seamless stockings, and shoes with kider fine calf uppers. Avoid heating the feet and change the shoes frequently. Any sweet oil will heal the soreness of a joint, and sometimes anointing it with lotion will bring relief. When a bunion gets troublesome, the best plan is to buy a stick of sulphate of copper, pare away the dead skin and cauterize the spot. The operation is a trifle painful, but it is only momentary, while the sense of relief that is sure to follow is like the "peace that passeth understanding."—New York World.

27 Per Cent. Stronger.

The amusing advertisement of a rival Baking Powder, claiming that its 27 per cent stronger than the other must refer to its small (?) and well known competitor.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Is a pure cream of tartar powder, brought to the highest degree of strength and perfection.

Truly the ideal Baking Powder.

Its superiority over every other can be clearly shown by any fairly conducted competitive test, whether made in the laboratory or kitchen.

SUMMER SCHOOL NOTES.

Professor Woods is to deliver an astronomy lecture at 8 o'clock this afternoon on "Bookcases." All borrowed books should be returned to day.

Dr. Ely's subject for this night is "The Golden Mean, or Practical Social Reform."

Following is the schedule for to day:

8:30 to 9 Botany, Mr. Woods; Physics, Professor Cooper.

9:30 to 10 Geology, Professor Baughman.

10:30 to 11 English, Mr. Tyler; Zoology, Professor Gardner.

11:30 to 12 Teutonic Mythology, Mr. Krauss.

2:15 to 3 French, advanced, M. Cazenove; intermediate, Mr. Arundel.

3:15 to 4 Greek, Philosophy, President Slocum; Greek mythology, Miss Taylor; elocution, Mr. Arundel.

4:15 to 5 French, colloquial, M. Cazenove; German, advanced, Mr. Arundel.

5:15 to 6 Drawing, Miss Smalley; "Electricity," Professor Woods.

8 p. m. Social sing, Dr. Ely.

Chautauqua's Programme.

Today's programme at the Glen Park Chautauqua is as follows:

9:30 a. m. Botany lecture, "Roots," Professor Wm. C. Strong.

11 a. m. Assembly lecture, "Hidebrand," Rev. C. E. Spencer.

1:30 p. m. Round Table, "The State," Professor Wm. C. Strong, Professor Wylie.

7:30 p. m. Music and Elocution.

MANITOU NOTES.

Mr. J. J. Raple and family of Pittsburg are at the Barker.

Mr. J. B. Holbrook of New York, city is a guest at the Iron Springs.

W. W. Clegg and wife of Louisville, Ky., are being entertained at the Cliff.

Dr. and Mrs. Clifford Mitchell of Chicago are registered at the Manitou house.

Mr. H. S. Cobbs, manager of the Pike's Peak Cog road, was called east yesterday.

Mr. Otto Schneider and family of Denver will spend two or three weeks at the Cliff.

H. B. Gordon and family of St. Louis are at the Iron Springs for an extended visit.

Mrs. Adolph Mueller and daughter, from Highlands, Ill., are at the Sunny Side to spend a few weeks.

Rev. Mr. King of Waco, Tex., is spending his vacation at The Sunny Side, with his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. Conger and wife.

Mr. A. Reinhart of Hiogo, Japan, who has in charge the Japanese exhibit at the World's Fair, is stopping at the Manitou house.

Robert P. Holmes of St. Louis has joined his mother at the Cliff. Mrs. Maleom of Denver, who is a sister of Mrs. Holmes, is also at the Cliff.

Both the carriage line and the Cog road report business good considering the financial stringency. About one hundred on an average make the ascent of the Peak every day.

"Montana Charley" and "Lariat Bill" are cowboys who are making a tour of the United States giving exhibitions on the way to pay expenses. They are decked and adorned rather elaborately in true cowboy regalia. Their buckskin jackets, fur trousers, sombrero hats and high heeled boots, attracted the attention of the natives and astonished and amazed the eastern tenderfoot. They gave an exhibition in front of the Barker hotel which consisted of fancy riding, lariat throwing, clog dancing and general theatrical performances. The hat was passed around when it was found that the spirit was strong and the flesh weak.

GREEN MOUNTAIN FALLS.

Rev. F. Oakes is a new arrival at the Falls, to remain for some weeks.

Mr. D. Elliot of The Gazette staff, Colorado Springs, is sojourning at the hotel.

Mrs. J. H. Bemis of the Springs spent Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the hotel.

Mr. J. D. Hance of Newark, N. J., has taken accommodations on Howard avenue for a stay of two weeks.

Mr. C. H. Barnes and Mr. E. S. Bumstead of the Springs, spent Sunday with their families at the Falls.

Among new comers at the hotel are Mr. E. D. Orton of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mr. D. Hainday of Cairo, Ill.

A most delightful card party was given in the parlors of the hotel Monday evening, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Peak, and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hanley of Kansas City.

Neatly furnished tents with shingle roofs are a novelty with many. They are very popular with those who enjoy an abundance of Colorado air, without the inconveniences of the mid day heat and of dampness in the event of rain.

The musical and literary entertainment given at Red Butte hall Saturday evening, was a success in every particular. The hall which seats two hundred, was full, and the programme was enjoyed by all. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Congregational Church and was so much of a success, as to prompt those in charge to give another entertainment, which will be announced in the near future.

Eating London Sandwiches.

Among the crowd (?) who rushed into the other free lunch room of the London and North-eastern line, where we had to wait for an hour, was a chap who had made up his mind to say something anyhow when he came to pay for his refreshments. He was growing warm he went so far as to jawed all the while he was eating, and when he showed up to the counter to pay he shouted out:

"Those sandwiches are enough to kill a dog."

"What sandwiches?"

"Why, those on the table."

"But we have no sandwiches on the table."

"You haven't? Well, I should like to know what you call those roasted bricks on that blue platter."

"You didn't try to eat one of those?"

"Yes, I did. I have led five."

"Then, my friend, you had better go to a doctor at once. Those are table ornaments made of terra cotta, and were placed there to help fill up space. Upon my word, you must have strong teeth and jaws."

The traveler rushed to the nearest doctor's, had an emetic, and returned for his train. He didn't get over looking pale for three hours. And they were sandwiches after all, real good ham sandwiches, mind that day.—London Tit Bits.

How the Forgetmenot Was Named.

Everybody knows the pretty little forgetmenot and likes the flower more perhaps, because of its name than its beauty. How was it so called? The German account for it by quite a pathetic romance. It seems that once upon a time a knight and a lady were walking by the bank of the Danube when the latter asked her "gallant gay" to pluck for her a tiny blue flower which she saw growing in the stream. No sooner said than done, but the knight, overbalancing, fell into the river, and owing to the slippery nature of the bank and the weight of his own armor was carried away by the current. As he threw the flowers ashore to his lady he cried out with his last breath, "Vergiss mein nicht!" ("Forgetmenot!") And ever since the flower has been looked on as the emblem of fidelity.—Philadelphia Times.

The Emperor and the Mandarin.

The favorite horse of the Chinese emperor Tsi having died through negligence on the part of the master of the horse, the emperor in his rage would have run that functionary through with his sword. The Mandarin Yent-Se, however, parried the blow, saying:

"Sire, this man is not yet convicted of the crime for which he deserves to die."

"Well, then, tell him what it is."

"Listen, you scoundrel," said the minister, "to an enumeration of the crimes which you have committed. First, you have allowed a horse to perish which the emperor has intrusted to your safe keeping. Moreover, it is owing to you that our sovereign became so exasperated that he was on the point of killing you with his own hand. Lastly, it is your fault that he was about to disgrace himself in the eyes of everybody by killing a man for a horse."

"Let him go," interrupted the emperor, who, timorstood the lesson. "I pardon him."—Monde Illustre.

Verbs and Sympathy.

"Mamma, I is so sleepy."

"Not 'I is,' my pet."

"Well, me is."

Mamma shakes her head wisely. "No."

"Me—me bed."

Another negative shake.

"Me—me—am?" doubtfully.

"No, 'I am' so sleepy."

"Am oo? Go home to bed too?"

Collapsus maternus.—Vogue.

Who Can Pronounce His Name?

The many friends of Mr. Joseph Sidz will be pleased to learn that his integrity and ability have been recognized. Mr. Sidz was called into the presence of Director Pollner on Saturday and asked whether he would accept appointment as Poundkeeper at the south end.—Cleveland Leader.

The feasibility and advantage of dredging the Salmon river with a view to obtaining the concentrated treasure in the form of placer gold is being earnestly discussed by California scientific writers.

It is said that Kaiser Wilhelm in emulation of the Caliph Haroun al Raschid passes considerable time in walking about the streets and his capital in disguise, studying the condition of his subjects.

Bald Heads!

What is the condition of your hair? Is your hair dry, harsh, brittle? Does it split at the ends? Has it a lifeless appearance? Does it fall out when combed or brushed? Is it full of dandruff? Does your scalp itch? Is it dry or in a heated condition? If these are some of your symptoms be warned in time or you will become bald.

Skookum Root Hair Grower

is what you need. Its production is not an accident, but the result of scientific research. Knowledge of the diseases of the hair and scalp is the key to treat them. "Skookum" contains neither mineral nor poison. It makes hair, but a delightfully cooling, and refreshing lotion by stimulating the follicles. It stops falling hair, cures dandruff and gives skin as soft as a kids.

TRADE MARK Registered

IF Kept the scalp clean, healthy, and free from irritating crusts, it will keep the use of Skookum Root Hair Grower to a minimum. It costs but little, and a few cents worth will last a long time. Your druggist can not supply you send direct to us and we will forward express on receipt of price. One bottle, 6 for $5.00. Half size, not 3 for $1.00.

THE GAZETTE.

The Union Bible class at the Y. M. C. A. rooms will meet this evening.

Miss F. L. Thomas left last evening for a month's pleasure and business trip in the east.

Messrs. A. H. Cole and E. G. Pasters have been granted a patent for a measuring vessel.

Michael Sully of Manitou is to be treated at the Keeley Institute at the expense of the county.

Mr. L. M. Ferguson has returned from a trip to the World's Fair. His family will not return for some time yet.

Remember the social at the Christian church this evening. Ice cream and cake will be served. All are invited.

Mr. Howard Russell, editor of the Salida Mail and Colorado Pythian, was in the city yesterday, circulating among his subscribers.

The address to the convention of milk-maids at Weber hall this evening will be given at 8 o'clock. The maids will be there with their pails, stools and cow.

W. R. McCree has begun a suit in the District Court to restrain the Prince Albert Mining company from transferring certain stock to Carlton Beardsley.

The Interstate Milk Maids' convention will be held this evening in Weber Hall. The price of admission is 25c. A good time is promised all "Who go a milking, sir, I say."

Mrs. S. W. Draper and children and Miss Wilcox, of East Boulder street, have gone to Salt Lake City for a month to try the benefit of the salt water bathing for the children.

In the window of Holbrook & Perkins Tejon street window yesterday was exhibited a large piece of artificial ice in the center of which was frozen a lake trout weighing four and one-half pounds. The fish was caught in Prospect lake by Mr. George Green. It attracted a great deal of attention.

Hugh Williams of the Diamond livery on Willamette avenue inserts a card in THE GAZETTE to the effect that he is now prepared to give lessons in riding, hurdle jumping, either in private or on the road. Mr. Williams is an accomplished riding master and has a very fine line of riding horses.

The management of the Summer school have arranged with the Pike's Peak carriage line to run another excursion to the Peak on Saturday of this week for $3.25 for the round trip from Colorado Springs. All persons desiring to take advantage of the cheap rate can get tickets at The Antlers' livery office on Cascade avenue.

Articles of incorporation of the Trachyte Gold Mining and Milling company have been filed with the county clerk. The company has a capital stock of $1,500,000. It will operate in this county with offices in Manitou. The directors are Judson Bent and W. C. Frost of this city, John Hulbert, C. E. Schudy and R. D. Weir, of Manitou.

Tuesday afternoon the original citizens' water committee, consisting of fifteen members, was called together by Mayor Strickler. It discussed plans and data that have been made by the city engineer for furnishing the city with a larger water supply. The report of the committee will be presented to the Council next Monday evening, but it is not thought advisable to make it public before that time.

The postoffice at Woodland Park was robbed during Tuesday night. The office is in the store of J. H. Baldwin. The thieves secured about $35 in cash, but no other valuables were missed. Yesterday afternoon Officer Atkinson of this city went up to Woodland Park to see if anything could be done to ferret out the perpetrators of the crime, and last night telegraphed that he had made an arrest. It seems that the thieves left tracks in the mud and they were trailed to a ranch near the town. Only one was arrested but no further particulars could be learned.

The girl, Belle Baker, who committed suicide at Colorado City, has not yet been buried. It is probable that she will be interred to day at the expense of the other women of the town at Colorado City. The coroner has been waiting to see if the man with whom she had been living would not pay the cost of burial, but he has returned from Denver, accompanied by another woman, and will pay no attention to the case. The new woman is said to have plenty of money, and it is probable that an inkling as to what was about to occur is the secret of the girl's suicide.

A gray horse hitched to a light buggy created considerable excitement on Tejon street and Pike's Peak avenue about 5 o'clock last evening. A dog snapped at the heels of the horse and frightened it into a run. The wheels caught in the car track and the front wheel on the left side was broken off. In this shape the outfit came down Tejon street, turned on to Pike's Peak and wound up at the Elk livery stable. The driver kept his seat during the entire time, until the horse fell down at the livery stable. The miserable dog followed the rig to the stable and when the horse fell jumped upon it and began biting its legs, but the horse gave him a good kick that sent him reeling.

Frank Howard Collier is an eccentric character who is doing the town just now. Nearly every one you meet has something new to tell of his numerous freaks. Collier, a number of years ago, was a prominent Chicago lawyer. One night he was sand bagged by footpads and the blow cost him his reason. He was for a time in an asylum. Not long ago he defended his own case and secured his freedom. He is possessed of considerable wealth. One piece of Chicago property he had taken temporarily just before his trouble befel him. In the condition in which his case has since been, the supposed lunatic, not actually proved insane, nothing could be done with the property and it has grown very valuable.

Baby is as Pretty as a Picture
In her new dress. How I wish we could afford to have her photo taken! This is a cry that we often hear, these hard times. We will give our friends a chance to get a good picture, and there isn't any fake or scheme about this either. All the good stores in town are having "special sales" every once and a while. We can't exactly have a special sale, but we will have special days. Every Monday and Friday during July we will give a special Discount of 50 per Cent.
On all work. You all know our prices. They have been just the same for the past six years, while our work is constantly improving. We have just received new backgrounds and accessories, and some novelties in card mounts. Call and have a sitting on BARGAIN DAY. Our regular first-class work guaranteed. No long delays.
